Visualizations of publicly available Open Data sets on public transportation in different cities. The color intensity of routes represents how often they are frequented by transport entities. Please note that not all transport possibilities in the cities above might be shown, e.g. in Madrid the Metro agency has not yet made their data available.

These visualizations have been created in association with the hope that more organizations start to make their data freely available after seeing which unexpected and beautiful projects may result.

“The coolest ideas of what you can do with your data always has someone else.”

Red: Bus. Blue: Tram. Green: Subway.
